The political monster, the same one that Nigel Farage felt had ‘undue influence over this country’ (EU) over our country motors on. It is unsavoury and it is not representative of the people within our country.

Taxes are raised to benefit the people who paid them. Defence, Health, Infrastructure, Education, Environment, Housing, Border Control, and A.N. OTHER.

Yet the people get the minimum as MPs choose to send overseas aid to countries with nuclear weapons, and space programmes, did we get a say?

International law is now an echo, United Nations defunct as a place where disputes can be aired and dealt with by mediation not missiles.

Disputes: Within the UK. There are so many disputes, from separation and devolution, to the practicality of what educators should be teaching or whether dying people should suffer in agony to the fears of some who think the next 'help' won't benefit their health, but end their lives. No humanity, no pity just the same old dialogue of me me me.

The veins, the heart and blood of this country is not pure, and hasn't been for the longest time. The influence of darker forces, to the interference overtly by tech billionaires to those whose vile and hateful ideation would not be uncomfortable in a by-gone era.

One party invests, the other cuts, living within our means never seems to have connotations of those in charge of spending, and the merry-go-round chuffs on and on without checks.

When does the UK get a fair reputable leadership whose only aim is to provide the things directed over hundreds of years by the fallacy of democracy.

Labour, Conservatives, Liberals, Reform. The questions asked are never answered. The obfuscation is endemic and the spin spun so violently now that up from down is an unknown quantity.

No politician is an Angel, but some are Demons. They fritter away around the edges, picking at wounds and lapping up the subsequent spill.

Humanity must have a better and cleaner way of leadership? Years ago the 'tax for our health' National Insurance was sold, it wasn't an honest sale, it was as deceitful as the leaders in so many parties who just talk continually, fully trained in the dark art of media management.

When a politician can answer each question without depending on the 'taught' response I will vote for them.

Democracy does not speak for me. It does not represent me, or you, it represents whatever those with the money and the power want it to represent. Consumerism and 'free trade' believing that things are cheaper if made abroad since our wages are far too high (who speaks those words? The ones with the money, who want to keep it. Not us.

I doubt there is a fix, although I feel certain that fixes have taken place in the past.

Cynicism is rife because politicians and their advisors LIE. Until that is stopped, until the lies are called out by REAL investigators and journalists. The left will fight the right – with each claiming the high ground, moral or other wise.

People of limited integrity take incentives civilians shafted.
